I could be healed

I was a mother of four young children with a very busy life when I was diagnosed with an incurable genetic disorder called Pompholyx.

It was a type of dermatitis that, at its peak, covered my hands in an itchy, blistery rash that wept and led to regular, highly infectious staph infections. My hands were burning hot all the time. I was unable to touch or hold anything that caused irritation.

I sought relief through salt water, apple cider vinegar, steroid creams, ice packs and anything else that was suggested, all to no avail. I exhausted all of the natural options and nothing worked.

It was extremely painful and each day was difficult. Despite trying everything, my hands worsened over approximately 12 months.

I decided to cry out to God and pray fervently in the Spirit with all of my heart, as I had reached my limit.

I left it in God's hands as I knew there was nothing more I could do.

About 3 weeks later, I woke up and knew something was different.

The heat which was always present, was gone!

I had not had that feeling in over a year. Within 1 week, my hands were completely normal – no scars or evidence that there had ever been anything wrong!

Praise our miracle-working God.
